

Welcome to the Dragonfly Boardwalk

Above the marsh, a female meadowhawk hovers. Summer is almost over and so is her short life in the air. Soon she will touch down and begin to lay her eggs in the pond water below...

Let a dragonfly be your guide. Come for a short walk to a viewing platform and soak up the sights and sounds of the marsh. Watch the water levels rise and fall with the seasons. Listen to the red-winged blackbirds buzzing in the cattails. Learn about the 26 species of dragonfly that share this space with us.

Blue-eyed damselfly

Green damselfly

Black-winged meadowhawk mating

Male

Female

Soft-bodied meadowhawk with egg mass

Water penny meadowhawk

What are Greenways?

Greenways are ribbons of natural space that link communities to each other and to the ecosystems that support them. They protect and restore habitat for wildlife as well as provide recreational and learning experiences for people. Watch for future projects sponsored by the Columbia River Greenways Alliance.

COLUMBIA RIVER

