CAUTION

Rock climbing involves risk and should only be attempted by properly equipped and experienced climbers.

Steep, rocky access trails may expose users to cliffs or steep drop offs. Use caution.

Pre-existing trails may leave the park boundary. Park visitors hiking or climbing beyond the park boundary should respect private land and management strategies for the Wildlife Management Area.

Grasslands are a Rich but Vulnerable Landscape.

On the eastern slopes of Skaha Lake, rolling hills of bunchgrass, sparse ponderosa pine forests and rugged rocky outcroppings offer a refuge for an abundance of plants and animals. Some of Skaha's rare species include Bighorn Sheep, Night Snake, Western Rattlesnake, Western Screech Owl and Spotted Bat.

The Gillies Creek Corridor portion of the park (southern and eastern section) is managed with a priority on biodiversity conservation through a covenant with the Nature Conservancy of Canada. Impacts from human activity in this area are being minimized in order to enhance the natural values there. Four multi-purpose trails are sanctioned, but there will be no additional recreational development (i.e. trails or rock climbing) within that section of the park.

Please minimize your impact on this important habitat.
